The history of the President's case to-day is almost a repetition of yesterday. The physicians say he has passed a good day, and that his general condition to-night is about the same as last night at this hour. His appetite is improved, and the pus discharged during the day is healthy and has diminished in quantity. Dr. Hamilton said to-night that he considered the President better, and that his patient had expressed himself during the day as feeling better, while the instruments of precision used in determining and any proposition fixed by the authorities; and we agreed at all times to submit every question of issue to arbitration. The Erie company has no wish or spirit inconsistent with the speediest, most available and permanent adjustment of this whole question. In conversation to day in relation to cutting rates on the trunk lines, and the recent interview with W. H. Vanderbilt, John W. Garrett, President of the Baltimore and Ohio road, said that as several days had elapsed without any correction having been made, it will be presumed that President Vanderbilt accepted the responsibility of having made the statement. He added: "It is painfully easy to convict President Vanderbilt of a great lack of knowledge on the subject, his reat lack of knowledge on the subject, his statements in reference to the Baltimore and
